

The Paul Woolley Centre for Capital Market Dysfunctionality

CALL FOR PAPERS – CONFERENCE 2010

The Paul Woolley Centres for Capital Market Dysfunctionality were established during 2006 as the result of generous grants made by Dr. Paul Woolley (ex-Chairman, GMO Europe). The centres are located at the London School of Economics, Toulouse University and the University of Technology, Sydney (UTS). The UTS Centre is to hold its 4th annual conference on campus on Thursday 28 October and Friday 29 October, 2010. Attendance at the conference is limited to approximately 100 people and invitations to attend are keenly sought by both academics and practitioners.

The keynote speaker for 2010 is Stephen Brown of NYU Stern with additional overseas speakers being drawn from other overseas universities including the other Paul Woolley Centres.

Focus

We are seeking proposals to write papers on any topics that relate to the existence, causes, consequences, and mitigation of capital market dysfunctionality. Contributions focusing on retirement savings topics relevant to dysfunctionality would be particularly welcome.

As in previous years we are seeking proposals based on papers that are either the germ of an idea or are in an embryonic stage of their development.

Financial Assistance

The Paul Woolley Centre is willing to provide up to a maximum of $6,000 towards the costs of preparing original papers to be presented for the first time at the 2010 conference and/or the costs associated with travelling to participate in the conference.

Call for Papers

The Call for Papers closes on Monday, 1st February 2010. The process that we require you to follow when proposing papers is set out below:

- (a) You should provide in a maximum of two pages an outline of the paper that you intend to produce
- (b) Your proposal should be emailed to the Executive Officer of the Centre at UTS, Yvonne Gray, by the close of business on Mon, 1 February 2010 at Yvonne.Gray@uts.edu.au

You will be notified regarding the success of your application no later than Friday 26 February

Submission Deadline

Successful applicants will be required to provide us with a final copy of your paper for presentation at the conference no later than Friday October 8.

Website: www.pwc.uts.edu.au